INTRODUCTION.

In submitting to public auction the first portion of the most remarkable and extensive Collection of Coins formed by the late Mr. Hyman Montagu, we hope that it will not be considered out of place, though perhaps it may be somewhat unusual, if we preface our remarks on the actual catalogue with a short biographical notice of the founder of this collection, and with some details relating to the history of its formation.

Hyman Montagu, F.S.A., Vice-President of the Numismatic Society, was educated at the City of London School, where he achieved considerable success in the classics and in modern languages, the knowledge of which stood him in such good service in later years, when he took up the study of ancient as well as English numismatics. In early life, even in his boyhood, Mr. Montagu showed those qualities for collecting, which became so marked in later years, and formed a very complete collection of coleoptera, of which an older and more experienced naturalist could with justice be proud. His frequent visits to the country in search of these objects of natural history induced him also to take up the study of botany, and he was as ready in explaining the properties of a rare plant or flower as in discussing some abstruse question in numismatics.

Quitting his scholastic studies Mr. Montagu, instead of proceeding to one of the universities, which was his great wish, and where no doubt his career would have been a distinguished one, devoted himself to the study of the law. His first step in that direction was signalised by his gaining the Clifford's Inn prize awarded by the Incorporated Law Society at its final examination. His close application to his profession for many years left him but little leisure for other pursuits, which may have been more congenial to him. What Mr. Montagu undertook, it was always his endeavour to accomplish thoroughly, and this dominant feature in his character was the key-note to his success. Having firmly established himself in his profession, and his position in the future being well ensured, he rightly considered that a little distraction into some other channel would be good for his active mind, and thus he was led to turn his attention to numismatics. It was no sudden or unpremeditated fancy, as in his earlier days he was disposed to take up this study; but as he knew that coin-collecting was a somewhat expensive pursuit he deferred any serious thoughts of it, until he was in a position to carry it out with success. It was therefore not till about the year 1878 that he began to form his collection of coins. He first directed his attention to the coinages of his own country including in this section those of the ancient Britons. He determined that his collection should embrace all classes of coins, which had been struck in this country from the earliest to the latest times. At first Mr. Montagu purchased somewhat slowly, feeling his way cautiously, and studying minutely the various intricacies of English numismatics. As his confidence in his own judgment increased, and with it his ardour for the pursuit, he purchased more rapidly, especially of the London dealers and at public sales; so that by the time that he became a member of the Numismatic Society in 1882 he had already formed an extensive collection, not only of English coins but also of English Historical Medals. The purchase in 1883 of the whole of the splendid Addington cabinet of English coins placed his own on a level with the finest of private collections in this country. He still however continued to purchase largely, and being known as a very ready and a very liberal buyer, not a day passed but that he added to his collection. About this time also he acquired several small cabinets of private collectors, which quickly swelled the number of his specimens. In 1887 the acquisition en bloc of the splendid collection of Mr. William Brice of Clifton, at once placed Mr. Montagu's far above anything that had been brought together previously by a private collector in this country. Mr. Brice was well known as a most fastidious collector, choosing only what was of the finest and rarest: and the truth of this statement will be borne out by an examination of such coins in the present sale as were in his cabinet. For many years, so to say, Mr. Brice had the run of the public sales, there being but few competitors when he began collecting, and thus nearly all the English coins that had been sold in this country, both privately and publicly of a special character, had found their way into his cabinet.

With this great addition Mr. Montagu found that the field for acquiring English coins, not already in his collection, was now growing very limited, and that if he continued to carry out this pursuit he must turn his attention to other branches. Having taken up numismatics as his special study he was not disposed to change his course; so, without hesitation, and it being in complete accord with his artistic tastes, he began to form a cabinet of Greek and Roman coins. In the Greek series he laid a good foundation by acquiring the whole of the stock of M. Hoffman, the well-known dealer in Paris; and in the Roman by very large purchases of gold coins from the famous collection of the Vicomte Ponton d'Amécourt. These large purchases determined Mr. Montagu to limit in some way his English collection, and as the later coins from George I to Victoria never possessed much charm to him he disposed of that portion of his collection to the dealers Messrs. Spink & Sons. What that portion consisted of can well be seen from the catalogue published by that firm in 1891. All that need be said here is that it was quite in character with the other portions of the English series, and that nearly every coin was in the finest condition, and that the collection included all the rarest patterns.

Mr. Montagu's frequent visits to the Continent soon placed him in correspondence with the foreign dealers, and there was scarcely one of any standing as far south as Sicily, or as far east as Athens and Asia Minor, with whom he had not transactions. The result was that his cabinet of ancient coins increased as quickly as his English series had done in former years. The rapidity with which he collected is shown by the extent of his collection. His Greek series fills several cabinets and includes many of the rarest and finest coins ever struck, whilst his Roman gold coins, which are nearly all in the finest state of preservation, number over 1300 specimens. It is the largest series of Roman gold ever brought together by a private collector. That of the Vicomte Ponton d'Amécourt was considered the finest collection of modern times: but Mr. Montagu's exceeds it by nearly 300 coins, and is certainly equal to it as to the condition of the coins.

We have said but little of his collection of English Medals. This also is the largest and most complete ever formed by a private individual. It numbers over 3000 pieces, and in some periods such as the Commonwealth, James II, Anne, and George II, it is even more extensive than that in the National Collection. Mr. Montagu's most recent important purchase in the series of English coins was at the Marsham sale, where he bought much more extensively than is generally known.

As a collector Mr. Montagu possessed those qualifications to a very high degree which are necessary to command success; first an intimate knowledge of the value and importance of coins; secondly a complete confidence in his own judgment, and, lastly, ample pecuniary means, which enabled him to take advantage of any opportunity that might present itself.

Thus far we have only written of Mr. Montagu as a collector: we must now view his career as a numismatist. It is much to be regretted that most of the leading collectors of bygone days in this country, especially of English coins, have not proved to be great numismatists; and many, who have had an intimate acquaintance of the subject, have not left behind them a single trace of their knowledge beyond what can be gathered from the sale catalogues of their collections. Not so was it with Mr. Montagu. As we have before observed, what he undertook he did thoroughly, and he did not therefore collect coins from a mere love of collecting or for possession only, but principally with a view to ascertaining what he could learn from his collection, and what new light he might be able by this means to throw upon the numismatic history of the world. His collections were therefore formed with a special object, and that object was the furtherance of the science of numismatics. As soon as he acquired any coins, whether in small or large quantities, each specimen was placed in its proper place in his cabinets, a note was made from what source it had been obtained and where possible through what collections it had previously passed. To these was added any point of numismatic importance which the coin might demonstrate. What amount of labour this entailed only those know who have had the privilege of examining the collection. This close study of his own treasures has borne good fruit; for, during the thirteen years that he was a member of the Numismatic Society, he contributed upwards of thirty papers to its Journal, and some of them of the first importance especially to English numismatics. It is not possible to give a list of these papers but the mention of a few will show how wide was Mr. Montagu's knowledge of the subject. They are

(1) Silver Stycas of Northumbria and York.

(2) "A Find of British Coins in Suffolk," commonly known as the Freckenham hoard.

(3) The Coinage of Æthelbald of Wessex.

(4) The Mint of Castle Rising in Norfolk.

(5) The Anglo-Saxon Mints of Leicester and Chester.
(6) The Durham Pennies of Bishops de Bury and Hatfield.
(7) The Gold Nobles found at Fischenich; being an account of the Coins struck in the Low Countries in imitation of the English Nobles.
(8) The Coinage of Edward V.

His shorter papers were mostly on the more recent coinages.

In addition to these he published in 1885 his work on "The Copper, Tin and Bronze Coinage and Pattern Coins of England," which has already reached a second edition and is the standard work on the subject. He only wrote one paper on Greek coins, in which he described a few of the rarities and unpublished specimens in his cabinet; and at the time of his decease he was engaged on a similar paper on the unpublished Roman gold coins in his collection. This though unfinished we hope will be found sufficiently complete to admit of publication. Besides what he had done Mr. Montagu had planned out much more work in the future, which alas he has not lived to accomplish, more especially as regards the English series. A much more complete work is much needed in this branch of numismatics. Ruding supplies us with the Annals of the Coinage of England, and Hawkins describes the types of the coins. A combination of these two works is what is wanted, and such a work Mr. Montagu had in contemplation. But he knew that it could not be successfully carried out without ready access to the coins themselves. With his own cabinet at his disposal, and with that at the British Museum for reference, as well as one or two other private collections, the chief material would be supplied; and had he lived there is but little doubt that such a work would have been carried out, and with success. Now this task is indefinitely postponed and whether it will see the light within a measureable distance of time is very doubtful. It is but giving Mr. Montagu his due credit when we say that for the last thirteen years no one has done more, if so much, for English numismatics as he has. In this way as well as in a host of others his death is much to be deplored. Especially will it be felt by the members of the Numismatic Society; at whose meetings he was one of the most constant attendants. He took a leading part in all the discussions, and no one was listened to with more attention, and no remarks were more appreciated than those which fell from his lips. His usefulness to the Society was held in such high esteem that for many years at the anniversary meetings he was re-elected one of its Vice-Presidents, a course never before taken by the Society; and he himself showed his appreciation of the work of the Society by bequeathing to it a sum of money to be devoted to the advancement of numismatic research. He was always ready to give a helping hand to his colleagues, and his great courtesy and consideration had endeared him to its members. It is not possible to describe the shock, which the news of his almost sudden and certainly unexpected death caused amongst his numerous friends. His death took place in London, on the 18th February last, in his fiftieth year, and at the meeting of the Numismatic Society, three days later, resolutions of condolence to his widow and family having been passed, the members as a tribute of respect to their late Vice-President at once adjourned. It may be added that Mr. Montagu liberally bequeathed to the National Collection his series of Becker's forgeries in gold of Roman Aurei, and his numerous bequests to Charitable Institutions were but an example of the liberality he had practised during his life.

The completeness and richness of Mr. Montagu's collection of English coins is well illustrated by the following catalogue of his Ancient British series and of a portion of his Anglo-Saxon series. Never before has such a collection been offered for public sale and it is but a sample of what the whole consists. In most sales of important collections these two series are generally disposed of in a single day, or at the most in two days. In this instance we have no less than six days sale and the Anglo-Saxon coins are not exhausted. As it was found impossible to include all the Anglo-Saxon coins in one sale, a break has been made at the end of the reign of Eadweard II, the Martyr. But in order to lighten somewhat the next sale it was thought advisable to divide into two portions the very large series of the coins of Æthelraed II, Cnut and Edward the Confessor, and to include the first portion in this sale. A division as equal as possible has been made; so that the next sale will contain quite as many coins of these three reigns and an equal number of rarities. The present selection alone numbers nearly 100 lots and there are quite as many to follow. One very important feature in this collection is that there are absolutely no duplicates. Not a single coin has been turned out, and, with the exception above mentioned, the coins have been catalogued exactly as they were placed by Mr. Montagu himself in his cabinets.

In the catalogue the coins have been somewhat fully described in order that it may serve as a record of this grand collection and, as it is hoped, may probably prove of use to future researches in English numismatics, especially as such a large number of specimens are unpublished. The pedigrees of the coins are given where practicable, and the accuracy of these can be safely relied upon*. They have been gleaned from Mr. Montagu's own notes, either written by him on the cards placed beneath the coins, or from his annotated catalogues of the important sales which have taken place during the last thirty or forty years. It will be seen from these references that all the great collections are very fully represented, and therefore it is quite unnecessary to mention them individually. A very large number of the coins are so to say historical pieces, either possessing long pedigrees or being the actual specimens illustrated in the standard works, such as Ruding, Hawkins, the Numismatic Chronicle, &c.

It is quite impossible to set forth in detail the numerous noteworthy pieces in which the collection abounds; but some individual coins and some series are of such exceptional interest that it would scarcely be fair to pass them over without some mention. We would, therefore, specially draw attention to the following:—

In the Ancient British Series. The large series of uninscribed Staters and Quarter-Staters (1-43); the inscribed Staters and Quarter-Staters of Verica (56); Eppillus (66); Tasciovanus (79); Epaticcus (81); Cunobelinus (87); the Iceni from the Freckenham Hoard (92-109); the Brigantes (112). Silver; Quinarii of Verica and Eppillus (120); Tasciovanus (121), and Cunobelinus (126).

In the Anglo-Saxon Series. The Gold Sceattas (146-152). Mercia, the Sceattas of Peada (172, 173), and Æthelred (174); the unrivalled series of Pennies of Offa (175-223), and Cynethryth (224-228); Coenwulf (230, 235, 239, 240); Ceolwulf I (259, 265); Beornwulf (266-269); Berhtwulf (275); Ceolwulf II (281, 282). Kent, Ecgberht (283, 284); Cuthred (286-289); Baldred (293); Abps. of Canterbury, Jaenberht (296-298); Æthelheard (299); Wulfred (308); Ceolnoth (317); Æthered (327); Plegmund (338). East Anglia, Beonna (339, 340); Æthelstan I (349); Æthelweard (354); Æthelstan II (364). Northumbria, Ecgfrith (376); Osred II (384); Halfdan (400); Sitric Gale (423); Regnald

* Unfortunately an error occurs in the note to lot 282. For "the Rev. E. J. Shepherd" read "Mr. S. Addington."

(425). Wessex, Ecgbeorht (454, 464, 466, 468); Æthelwulf (482); Æthelbald (498); Ælfred (517 (Exeter), 518-535 (London), 545, 554, 559); Eadweard the Elder (588-593 with floral ornaments, 594-602 with buildings, 603-605 with hand of Providence); Æthelstan (610, 633, 637, 645-648); Eadmund (650); Eadred (669-671, 672, 677, 690); Eadwig (696, 697); Eadgar (718, 721); Eadweard II (751); Æthelraed II (770, 789, 800, 801); Cnut (814, 821); Edward the Confessor (838, 842, 849, 854-856), and very many others.

If further we were to select from the above, we would draw special attention to three coins each unique, viz. those of Ceolwulf II of Mercia (282): of Halfdan of Northumbria (400), and of Ælfred (545), all of which have the same remarkable type of reverse copied from the Roman solidus.

From the six autotype plates some idea will be formed of the general condition of the coins.

In submitting this first part of Mr. Montagu's collection for public sale it may be useful to announce what are the intentions of his executors respecting the disposal of the rest of the collection.

The Greek coins will be sold at this house in March next; and the Roman gold coins will be disposed of in Paris in April next. In the following May the sale of the second portion of the English Series commencing with the coins of Æthelraed II will take place, and other sales of English, Irish, and Anglo-Gallic will follow at short intervals at this house, till the whole collection has been disposed of. As to the collection of English Historical Medals it was Mr. Montagu's wish that it should be sold en bloc. Every effort will be used to carry out these wishes; but should a purchaser not be found, then this also will be offered by us for sale by public auction.

DRED. R. Small cross; rev...... AD. MO. Cross between two annulets?; below, rosette, extremely rare 2  The first coin is of the same type as lot 677, and bears the same moneyer's name; it was therefore struck at Oxford, though it does not bear a mint name. The second coin is a cut half of a Halfpenny, and was therefore current for a Farthing. Only one perfect Halfpenny of this reign is known; it is in the Rashleigh collection, but it is of a different type to the above.
